Campaign Documents.

Abraham Lincoln's great speech delivered at Cooper Institute, New York, neatly printed, in pamphlet form, can be had at our counting room. Price one cent per single copy, 10 cents per dozen, 75 cents per hundred, or $4.00 per thousand. Orders from town and country solicited. Document No. 2 is also ready for delivery. It contains the late speech of Mr. Seward in the United States Senate, and the startling rejoinder of Judge Trumbull to Mr. Douglas' reply to the former speech. These two speeches make a handsome pamphlet. Price $1.00 per hundred; or $5.00 per 1000 copies. Let the country be flooded with these noble vindications of the Republican party. Send your orders.

WILL BATEMAN APPEAL?

Although neither Mr. Bateman nor Dr. Kane is permitted by more prominent Democratic leaders than the mselves, to say anything more in relation to the lodging and boarding of vote bought into this city for the purpose of seting the Democratic ticket, at the recent Municipal election, that fact shall not be permitted to put the leader to rest. Dr. Hoyne, the Democratic nominee for Alderman of the Third Ward, declares under oath, as follows:

At the request of W. B. Bateman, Chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee went to see Dousman, keeper of the Commercial House, on one of Saturdays or Sundays, on the second Friday before the late city election, and on the second Friday before the late city election, and on the second Friday before the late city election, and A THIRD PARTY.

The Third Party movement, organized by the gentlemen who vote the Democratic ticket regularly and take their whisky in the same way, now promises to be a failure. Its purpose is so plainly apparent that the few politicians of character and influence among the Old Line Whigs, who yet stand aloof from Republicanism, are prevented by mere shame from lending it their aid; and as for the cowboys, who have alternately belonged to each party, careful always to train with that one which promises the most and pays best, it is a matter of no consequence where they go, how many conventions they hold, or for whom they vote. Left to the latter, under command of the Brookses of the New York Express, the Baltimore Convention will never rise to that pitch of respectability in which it will be ent tled to contempt; and indications today are that it will not be able to command enough of the former to make its nominee the occasion of a moment's fear to any but the members of the Convention themselves. The people of this country have been too recently deluded by a movement like that which this Baltimore affair is intended to be, to suffer themselves to be caught in that trap again, at least until the memory of Fillmore and Donelson dies out. It seems to us, that if by some mistake, the Baltimore gathering should be the representative of anything not wholly fossilized, and if it should persuade some man less than an hundred and fifty years of age to accept the doubtful honor that it will offer, that the good sense and political sagacity of every man in the North who has the qualities which would impel him to choose Republicanism in preference to this new-fangled Democracy without a principle in its corner-stone, will be sure to give the thing a wide berth. To those of the South who hate the Democratic party, but whose prejudices forbid their espousing the Republican cause, support of the nominee of Baltimore will be an agreeable method of avoiding committals prejudicial to their pockets or persons. And to that class at the North who always say that slavery is a very great evil, and who always vote, if they can do so by indirection, to assist in spreading that evil over the largest possible extent of country, the third party and its candidates will be foiled with joy, as affording them the hope of doing the greatest amount of mischief, all the while protesting that they are only anxious to do the greatest amount of good. Fortunately this class is small; and in the heat of the approaching contest, will be so reduced in numbers by the friction of opposing forces, that before the day of voting, it will be almost powerless. The battle to be fought will be one of terrible earnestness, in which men who for years have been running around first one and then the other of the camps, wringing their hands and snivelling with fear, real or feigned, will have no place. And the supposition that those men by any concert of action or by any show of strength can persuade anybody that they have an appreciable power to influence the result, is an insult to the intelligence of the people which they will take good care to resent. The systematic, well-planned, and skillfully executed bamboozlement of 1856, by which a third of a million of men in the North were persuaded to throw away their votes, and by which the notoriously corrupt and utterly disgraceful administration of James Buchanan was forced upon the country, cannot be so soon repeated. One movement of that sort will suffice for a whole generation.

THE LINCOLN DOUGLAS DEBATES.

We have frequently directed attention to the volume of public discussions (just issued by Messrs. Follett, Foster & Co., of Columbus, Ohio) between ABRAHAM LINCOLN and STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS, in our Senatorial campaign two years ago. A re-perusal of these debates, in which we have been enabled to divest ourselves of partisanship, and the exciting personal strife growing out of the canvass, convinces us that a clearer presentation of the slavery issues growing out of the Nebraska bill and Dred Scott decision than this, is not to be found. We will say nothing of the part which Mr. Douglas bore in that controversy. If it was satisfactory to his friends it is certainly satisfactory to us. Whether he triumphed over Mr. Lincoln in the argument, or Mr. Lincoln over him, it will be for each reader to decide for himself. The Republican State Central Committee of Ohio were so well satisfied of Mr. Lincoln's victory in that famous contest of logic that they deemed it worth their while to reproduce the debates as a campaign document of the present year.

The volume should have been entitled "The Conspiracy against Freedom." It will be remembered by those who are familiar with the features of the memorable campaign which elicited these discussions, that in Mr. Lincoln's opening speech at Springfield he charged upon the leaders of the Democratic party a scheme first to legalize slavery in all the Territories, and second to legalize it in all the States. The former he showed to have been accomplished by the Nebraska bill and the Dred Scott decision. The latter he pointed out with unmistakable clearness to be in diligent preparation through the instrumentality of the Lemmon case in the Supreme Court, provided the Presidential election of this year should give promise that the decision would be sustained after being made. To this "second Dred Scott decision" as Mr. Lincoln denominated it, the attention of all citizens should be especially directed. From the beginning to the end of the campaign, Mr. Lincoln pressed the view of this lurking decision making slavery alike lawful in all the States—in Illinois as in Alabama, in New York as in the Carolinas. And if the people failed to ratify his conclusions by sending Mr. Douglas, the chief conspirator, into the obscurity which he had earned, it was because a majority of the Legislature was elected by a minority of the voters. The impendency of this new encroachment on the liberty which our forefathers established—manifested by the late argument in the Lemmon case in the New York Court of Appeals, in which a leading Democratic lawyer and politician held that slavery is right and righteous, per se—gives this volume an immediate and living interest. The Republican press will come far short of their duty if they do not elaborate and repeat the truths so forcibly presented by Mr. Lincoln in this behalf. Let our Republican clubs avail themselves of the cheap edition of the Debates now within reach and give them the widest possible circulation.

REPUBLICAN PROGRESS.

Our advices from different sections of the State as to the progress of Republicanism, continue to be of the most encouraging character. In that silent yet potent revolution in popular sentiment which has been going on throughout the Northwest ever since the lapse of Democracy into Calhounism, Illinois has perhaps shared more largely than any other State; and as no period has the fact of such progress been more manifest than now. With a wise discretion in the selection of candidates for State and National officers, this State will take a position in the November election that will render her no longer debateable ground. This is not our opinion merely; it is the belief of our opponents as well. The Chicago Herald, which under its new management is fast gaining that prominent position with its party to which its merits entitle it, in its issue of yesterday, concedes the fact that the Republican party of Illinois is steadily increasing in strength. We quote:

> The people of Illinois are a loyal and democratic people; we have nothing to fear in dealing with them in the most manly and open way. To do that we are compelled to say, that in spite of our past invincibility, we have much to fear from Republicanism in Illinois. The Democracy have been slowly decreasing in power for some years. Our great Sectional Adversary has been at steadily increasing. * * *
> The question in Illinois has become no longer, whether this or that Democrat shall be honored or rewarded—whether this or that section of the State shall be accommodated, but whether we can succeed at all or not. Let us not therefore test the unwise part of underrating the strength of our adversaries, or of over-estimating our own.

PROSPECT OF WAR.

No positive intelligence of the manner in which Gen. Miramon will resent the capture of his two steamers by the U. S. squadron, off Anton Lizardo, has yet reached this country. There has been in the dispatches from the seaboard an unauthenticated rumor that on his return to the capital he would issue a decree expelling all Americans from the country, and confiscating their property to the uses of the State. If he should venture upon an expedient like this, by which he would at once replenish his exchequer, and gratify his hate of the American name, the temper of this country is such that war would be inevitable. The desperation of Miramon's situation will probably impel him to resort to any means by which he may unite the Mexican nation under his banner, and draw from European powers the aid without which his defeat would be certain. We know nothing, except by common report, of the alleged willingness of France and Spain to make common cause with the Church party in Mexico. But it is certain, if common report does not lie, and if Miramon is possessor of half the sense which his leadership demands, that sixty days will not elapse before the consequences of Commodore Jarvis's exploit will have proportions altogether exceeding the expectations of the people or the Administration. We await the news with no little anxiety.

REPLY TO A CORRESPONDENT.

EDITORS PRESS AND TRIBUNE:

I see by your article of this morning headed, "A Decision Wanted," that you are not aware of a law of Congress by which the attendance of witnesses may be compelled when summoned by a committee of either House, and by which also witnesses may be punished for contempt when they refuse to produce any papers required, or a query [sic] propounded. The qualifications with this statute would have to vary our doubts and make your whole statement.

YOURS, LAWYER.

April 5th, 1860.

COMMENT.—We were fully aware of the existence of the statute to which our correspondent refers, and the article of yesterday was written with the volume of the Statutes at Large containing it, open on the table before us. But we are not aware that the constitutionality of that act has ever been tested before any competent tribunal. It is a very easy thing for the House and Senate to resolve themselves into two courts of inquiry, and to cut any absurd antic which may please the majority; but as long as the Constitution remains in force, by which the powers of the legislative branch of the Government are clearly defined, and the rights of individual citizens protected, there is grave doubt about the authority of Congress, or any Committee thereof, to exercise judicial functions, and upon the warrant of the Speaker of either House, thrust any man into prison. We again express the hope, that as the Republican House and Pro-slavery Senate have each a witness in durese, that a writ of habeas corpus may be sued out of the United States Court, and the constitutionality or unconstitutionality of the law at once and forever settled.

COUNTY CONVENTIONS.

We feel greatly obliged to the numerous Republican County Conventions in this State which have designated the PRESS AND TRIBUNE as the journal to publish their proceedings and resolutions. The obligation extends both to the mark of approbation expressed, and to the assistance this rendered us in procuring full and accurate political intelligence. If a simple lack of space compels us to condense the proceedings furnished by the secretaries of the Conventions, and to publish only those resolutions which have an especial and peculiar significance, our readers will remember that the WEEKLY PRESS AND TRIBUNE contains only thirty-six columns, and that there are one hundred counties in Illinois, all of which are holding conventions within a period of about six weeks. The impossibility of publishing everything sent to us in extenso, in our weekly edition, and of doing justice at the same time to other topics of newspaper concern, will readily appear. We shall continue, however, to give the substance of everything our friends may choose to send us, in concise and readable form.

SAM. HOUSTON.

The New York Express is very sure that if the Charleston Convention will nominate Sam. Houston, he will walk over the track. The Express pledges him the States of Oregon, California, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Connecticut and Rhode Island. The Express is a modest newspaper. A few more scratches of the pen, and the editor could have named all the other Northern States. In behalf of Illinois, we thank him for his moderation.

A CRIME TO BE FOUR.

The Homestead bill was debated in the Senate on Thursday last by Pugh of Ohio, and Wigfall of Texas. The former advocated the humbug, worthless Senate bill. The latter was opposed to any kind of Homestead law. We quote a portion of the remarks of this Southern Democratic leader. He goes a step beyond "mud-sill" Hammond of South Carolina in his contempt for poor men. Read what this drunken Democratic slave-driver says! We copy from the New York Herald's report:

> Mr. Wigfall (Dem.) of Texas, proceeded at length, and said the passage of alternate sections would prevent the sale of the public lands. The passage of the bill would be the abandonment of the revenue and also an expense to the government, and if they are anywhere between one hundred and sixty dollars out of the Treasury to the homeless than to donate land and go to the expense of establishing land offices to survey it. His Railroad bill was for the practical purpose of transmitting naval and military stores; the Homestead bill was for paupers. It was popular to talk of the poor. Poverty, he said, was a crime. The man who was poor had sinned, and there was a screw loose in his head somewhere. He would amend the title of the bill to read, "for the encouragement of crime, providing for criminals and fixing the Constitution." It was proposed to give a homestead to all of the bone and sinew of the land, of wool, hats, and brogans, but poverty was a crime. He would not pander to prejudice by such talk. The bill provides for the purlieus of London, the Five Points of New York, and every man who violates the law when they go on the lands. The bill provides for those who could not provide for themselves. Gentlemen tried to be gay this evening, and two men, named John and W. H. Newcomb, father and son, stationed themselves in front of the Capitol, and attempted to do so. About 8 o'clock they made their appearance, and upon the newcombs attempting to enter they were refused admittance by the officer in charge, who for a time seemed likely to reash somewhat seriously to the attacking party. One of the slaves, a strong, determined man, was in possession of a bowie knife, with which he successively attacked the elder and younger Newcomb, both of whom hardly expecting to find the runaways that evening, had neglected to provide themselves with the exception of the younger one, who had a small loaded cane. At one time the negro with the knife had Newcomb, senr., down on the ground, and after having made one or two unsuccessful lunges at his breast, was just about to give him what would probably have proved a fatal thrust when the son came to his father's relief, and knocked the negro off with the loaded cane just as the knife was descending with an unerring aim. His desperate assaults were renewed shortly, and commenced an attack on young Newcomb, stabbing him in the course of the melee three times; but none of the cuts being serious, the latter succeeded, after a hard fight, and with the assistance of a big stone which fortunately was near by. In escaping lost a hole shirt-collar. In the meantime the others were secured, and the whole four delivered into the hands of the proper authorities.

Polygamy Forbidden by the Mormon Bible.

In the course of the debates on the Anti-Polygamy bill, in the House of Representatives, both the supporters and opponents of that measure seem to have been hopelessly befogg d upon the simple question whether polygamic practices are enjoined or forbidden in the Mormon religious creed. Mr. Hooper, the delegate from Utah, declares that "Polygamy is a part of the Mormon faith." Mr. Pryor, who had "examined the disgusting farrago called the Mormon Bible," averred that he could find there no word recognizing this tenet of belief. Neither of these gentlemen were right. The member from Virginia did not read his copy of Joe Smith's Bible with care; nor was the delegate from Utah quite honest. Mr. Pryor was correct in asserting that the Mormon canon does not recognize polygamy, but he omitted the material of one chapter, which positively forbids it, and thus oversets Mr. Hooper's declaration in the most summary manner.

In the "Book of Jacob," authorized edition of the "Book of Mormon," the following passage occurs:

> Behold my brethren, four brethren, whom we have known of their flesh unto and the exceeding whom hath come upon their sins, are more righteous than you; for behold ye have not condemned the practice of which was given unto our fathers, that they should have wives and concubines, and this thing was abominable before me, and there should not be committed among this people. Wherefore, because of this ye commit a greater sin than the Lamanites, the Lord unto whom I have spoken concerning their wives and children, and one day they shall become a blessed people unto the Lord.

Considering that the "Book of Mormon" is accepted by the Latter-Day Saints as their sacred record, this is tolerably clear testimony against polygamy. It may very properly be commended to the notice of the honorable gentleman from Utah, whose acquaintance with the theological literature of his co-religionists is evidently limited.—N. Y. Times.

MR. LOVEJOY'S SPEECH IN THE HOUSE.

Mr. Lovejoy, of Illinois, poured out the vials of his wrath upon slavery in the House to-day in a style which almost produced a battle on the floor. The scene has never been surpassed since the conflict resulting from the Grow and Keitt difficulty. The invective of the speaker—whose brother was the celebrated Alton martyr—was terrible. He walked from his seat down in front of the area, and half way over to the south side, storming out the most terrific imprecations upon slavery, and at the same time shaking his fist at them, as if the slave power stat impersonated there. A young, ardent and impetuous Virginian viewed his manner as an insult to Southern gentlemen, and coming up into the area also, asserted that Lovejoy ought not to be allowed to proceed unless he occupied his own place, under the rules. By this time the area was filled with members, all of whom were greatly excited. The chief object of the concentration about the Speaker's desk, and his principal assistant seemed to be to quiet them back to their places. Lovejoy would not stir until sometime after the Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms appeared with his mace and requested gentlemen to take their seats.

When the conflict was thickest, Lovejoy informed the infuriated crowd about him that they could not intimidate him. Potter of Wisconsin, who stood by his side, gave notice that he had a right to select his own position when he considered it necessary, and he (Potter) asked the gentleman from Illinois should not be allowed to go on out of order. Another member cried out: "He can't finish that speech here today," when Kellogg of Illinois sprang into the centre of the crowd in the area, and with gre t emphasis and feeling declared that his colleague was proceeding in order and should not be interrupted by interest or insult. That he was entitled to the floor, and must be allowed to go on; and when he was out of order, he (Kellogg) would be the first to check him. This last speech, together with the appearance of the Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms, b ought harmony out of chaos, and Lovejoy resumed the Clerk's desk and proceeded with and finished his speech—the substance of which the report of debates will show.

[Correspondence of the N. Y. Tribune.]

WASHINGTON, April 4, 1860.

The appearance of John Bell of Tennessee, in the political circles of Washington, has been followed by rumors, and more or less evidence of the purpose on the part of the National Union organization recently formed, to form a combination on Judge McLean for President, and John Bell for Vice President. Mr. Bell, it is understood, gives the scheme his general approval. It has the concurrence of most of the southern Opposition members from the South, who should be credited with a sincere hatred of the bogus Democracy, and an abiding wish at all times to beat it. While they are not Republicans, and never will be, they are the roughly anti-Locofoco, and do not feel isolated at all, in the disruption of parties, to find a lodgment in the bosom of their ancient enemy. Herein they differ widely from their Northern brethren, who are ready to unite on the shortest notice, with the Democrats, on Douglas, Breckinridge, or almost any body else.

Probably there is more significance (at least so intended) in this proposed combination on McLean and Bell, than in any movement that has as yet been developed from that quarter. Mr. Bell is the favorite with the Northern wing of the National men. They see, however, that nothing but Bell would attempt the experiment of making him simply a third candidate, while the success of the Democrats would follow as the result of a decided opposition. They know, also, that there would be but small chance for Judge McLean, who, they argue, ought to prove satisfactory at Chicago, though not the first choice, would not receive their cordial support, with Bell for Vice President. They point to this proposed arrangement as evidence of a sincere d t to unite the Opposition, and as a practicable way to accomplish it. Those among the Nationals who do not see why such a ticket should not be taken at Chicago is the design be to defeat the Democracy. In the elections in Tennessee and Kentucky of a majority of Opposition members of Congress is referred to as proof that, with such a combination, those States might be carried; at all events, it is argued, they could not be considered as any more doubtful than Pennsylvania, New Jersey, or Illinois, would be with Mr. Seward or any distinctive Republican ticket.

The appearances now are that this combination will be carried to Baltimore, where there is a likelihood of its being adopted. Should it be, what effect would or should it have on the Chicago Convention?

A Reverend Defaulter—The Head of a College Institution Runs Away with its Funds.

[From the Detroit Free Press.]

The acute fact of the suspicious absence of Rev. Clement Moore, President of the Catholic Institution at Sandwich, C. W., known as L'Assomption College, reached us several days ago, but we refrained from the full particulars of the affair, and to avoid originating a groundless rumor, we have withheld the information until the matter could be investigated. It is now ascertained that this reverend gentleman, the gentleman from Illinois should not be allowed to go on out of order. Another member cried out: "He can't finish that speech here today," when Kellogg of Illinois sprang into the centre of the crowd in the area, and with gre t emphasis and feeling declared that his colleague was proceeding in order and should not be interrupted by interest or insult. That he was entitled to the floor, and must be allowed to go on; and when he was out of order, he (Kellogg) would be the first to check him. This last speech, together with the appearance of the Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms, b ought harmony out of chaos, and Lovejoy resumed the Clerk's desk and proceeded with and finished his speech—the substance of which the report of debates will show.

The receipts of Corn to-day amounted to 45,000 bushels, and the market opened buoyant with an active inquiry at Saturday's outside quotations, but became weaker on Change till the receipt of the New York dispatches, when it again stiffened, and before the close advanced 2c, at which prices were firm. About 60,000 bu changed hands, at 46@46½c for new receipts No. 1; 43½@44c for No. 2, and 41c for rejected. There was no River Corn offered, except what is in store, and buyers and sellers were 1@2c apart in their views. Wheat was in fair supply and the market opened firm, and under a good demand, advanced 1c, closing firm after the receipt of the New York news. Flour was in fair demand for clusters of Pittsburgh markets, and holders were firm at Saturday's prices—sales ranging from $4.75@5.07 for Spring extras, and $5.75 for Spring superfine. Oats were in good demand for speculation and shipment, and the market advanced 1c, with sales at 30@31c for new receipts No. 1 in store, and 29@30c for lots on track. Rye in fair demand by distillers at 51@53c. Barley quiet, and rather dull for lots in store. Prime Timothy Seed is scarce and in demand; with sales of fair to good at $2.75@2.80. Hungarian Grass quiet at 50c. There was a better demand for Clover Seed, but the holders would not meet the views of buyers, and the market was inactive. For prime parcels $4.12½@4.25 was offered.

Freights quiet, with the engagement of one vessel to Port Colborne, with corn at 7c.

Albany, April 6.—Grain—The sales of Wheat are light, and include 1600 bu spring at $1.18; 100 bags winter and spring mixed at $1.50 f. o. b.; 100 do Canada Club at $1 85 f. o. b., and a car load White Western at $1.55. Corn 75c f. o. b. for yellow round. Rye in small lots 82 lbs. In street sales but little doing; Rye 84c; Corn 75@76c; Oats 40@42c. Whisky—22 cents nominally. Seed—Clover Seed is in fair demand for medium, and we quote 14@15c for first hands and in lots; large seed continues scarce at 16@16c. Timothy sells steadily at $3.37@3.62 for Illinois, and $3.62@3.75 for State.

St. Louis, April 6—Receipts by River 6810 sks corn; 585 bbls. flour; 187 sks oats; 1629 sks wheat; 198 bbls. whisky. By Railroads 1221 sks corn; 858 sks wheat; 71 bbls. whisky.

Wheat—The market was exceedingly dull, and sellers were forced to make concessions in order to effect sales. Strictly prime fall is quotable at $1.25@1.40, and dull at that for ordinary; good spring sold at a trifle under previous rates. Sales include 9450 bags good spring and c ub at $1 04@1.05; 1080 do at $1.07; 4100 bu prime spring at $1.08; 160 do choice at $1 18; 259 do common fall at $1.15@1 20; 183 do fair do at $1 21; 600 do prime red and white at $1.30@1 35; 500 do choice white at $1.37½; and 140 choice at $1.42, bags returned.

Corn—There is a material change in prices, and but a moderate business doing. Sales of 1,980 bgs fair and good mixed yellow at 43@43½c; 3,100 bgs prime yellow and mixed white at 50@55c, part on board; 1,050 do prime white at 55@56c, and 170 do do at 57c, all in new gunnies.

Oats—The supply continues fair, and prices are slightly easier for buyers. Sales embrace 1,000 bgs in lots at 29@30c, and 1,500 bgs prime and choice at 44@45c, 2,000 do good to prime at 43c. Sellers worked for an advance, but buyers held off on transactions were small. About 200 bbls in lots sold at 70c. The receipts of potatoes is small, with a steady downward tendency in prices. Sale of small lot Hungarians at 65c; 50 bgs good at 67½c; 15 bgs fair Timothy at 62½c; prime do at 40@62½ per bush.

Concerning provisions the Republican says:

The trade in provisions is somewhat active, and most of the country clear sides are cleared off the market; the feeling in bacon is good; a pretty large lot of mess pork was taken at $17, and we have a sale to note, made yesterday evening, of 200,000 lbs., (85,000 pcs.) this shoulders and clear sides, both on terms not private. Considerable country bacon sold to-day, at 7c for shoulders and 9½c for rib sides, but city shoulders are held at 7½c, and sides 9½.

CATTLE—The receiving features of the past week has been dullness, and many drovers affirm that it has been the worst week of the season. There has been but a light demand for cattle and that only for extra heavy. The larger portion of the shipments have been by drovers who will still have stock at a loss, and prefer to run their chances in the New York market where they will probably suffer a less loss than if sold here. Drovers generally are only for loss of very extra heavies, of which but few are arriving and parties owning it cattle from the country must not expect to get much in view for their ordinary; the 1c they will be wrestled down per cwt. A large portion of the arrivals stock with which the market is dogged, is retailed in small lots at from 1½c higher and even lower, and do not come in the line of sales. There has been a few sales during the week of very fat heavies as high as 6c and even 6½c per cwt., but for such cattle now in market with compare unfavorably with any lot of the same brought to market the season at $4.50, but there are exceptions, and most of the sales of even good fat cattle are for below this. For heavy lots there is always a ready and active demand and they will bring all they are worth, but the market is over-stocked with medium cattle.

HOGS—There has been little demand for hogs and the market is dull at a decline. There are but few hogs arriving here now, the receipts being mostly stock hogs.
